NORWEGIAN HOMESICKNESS

(is seeping through someones radio)

for flute, clarinet and violin
(2024)

About the piece

While composing this piece during a vacation in Spain, I contemplated what it was all about. For some reason I suddenly looked down and saw an ant struggling. A coworker ant had been crushed, probably by me when I carelessly tripped during my work, and the ant seemed to be in a panicked state trying to get help for its dead friend. A second ant came, and together they managed to get the dead ant onto the back of one of them. They then continued home to wherever they lived. Suddenly, amidst my enormous guilt for having killed an ant and witnessing this heart-wrenching scene, a light bulb went on. Norwegian Homesickness is about this! In the tiny, earnest struggle of these ants, I found a reflection of our own collective resilience and the need to belong and to heal.

This piece started with a desire to write something based on Norwegian folk music from my birthplace. This is, for me at least, akin to a longing to belong. In the harsh nature of time, we can never in our physical form return to the time and place of our childhood; that time and place now belong to something that is abstractly dead. The place still stands, and I'm still alive, but we are not the same as we were then. Just as the ant was grieving for his friend, I am, in a way, grieving the past. But, just as the ant quickly recovered and carried his friend back home, writing this piece is a healing process for me. It allows me to delve deeply into my heritage and try to understand it and the complex nature of time.

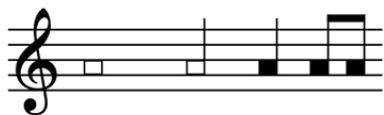

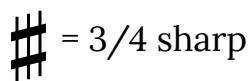

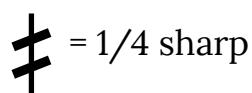

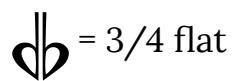

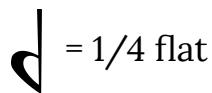

I'm also very truly interested in eastern philosophy and religion! In Tibetan Buddhism, there is a concept called "bardo." Bardo is a transitional state between life and death. This piece embodies that concept, representing a journey through the in-between spaces of memory and existence. It's about navigating the transition from what once was to what is now, and finding solace and understanding in the process. Through this exploration, I aim to bridge the gap between past and present, life and death, and to find peace in the ever-changing flow of time.

The following section (bar 76 to 89) should be performed like a ballet.
 As musicians, move only when playing.
 Remain completely still, as if frozen in time, when not playing.

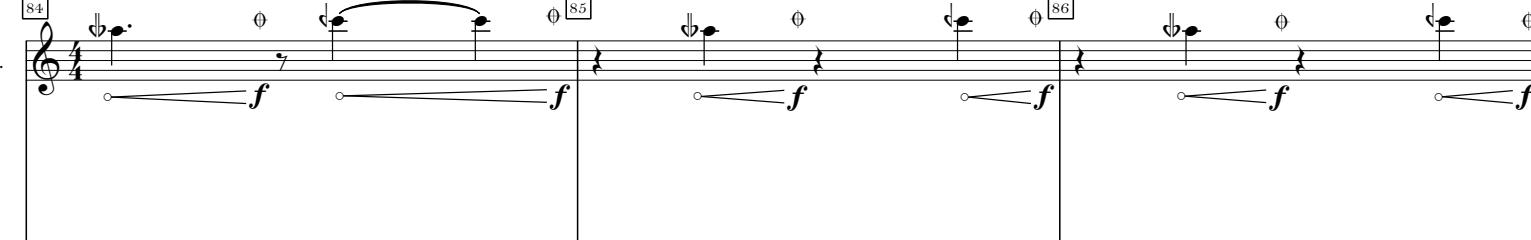

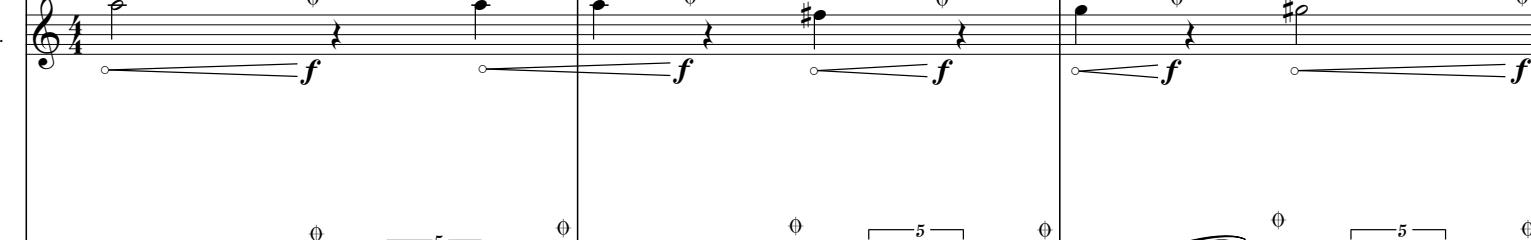

Musical score for flute (fl.), clarinet (cl.), and violin (vln.) from bar 75 to 89. The score consists of three staves. The flute and clarinet play sustained notes with dynamic markings mp. The violin plays eighth-note patterns with dynamics mp, f, and sharp cutoffs. Measure 76 is a rest. Measures 77 and 78 show the violin's eighth-note patterns continuing. Measure 79 starts with a sharp cutoff for the flute and clarinet. Measures 80 and 81 continue the eighth-note patterns for the violin. Measure 82 starts with a sharp cutoff for the flute and clarinet. Measures 83 and 84 continue the eighth-note patterns for the violin. Measure 85 starts with a sharp cutoff for the flute and clarinet. Measures 86 and 87 continue the eighth-note patterns for the violin. Measure 88 starts with a sharp cutoff for the flute and clarinet. Measure 89 ends with a sharp cutoff for the flute and clarinet.

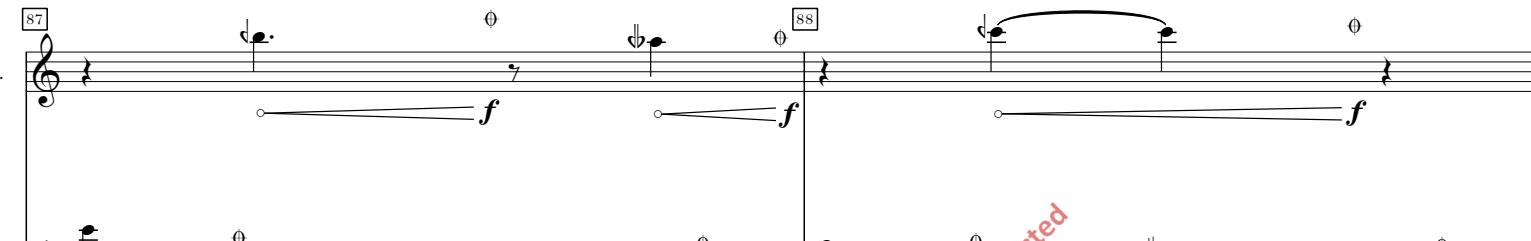

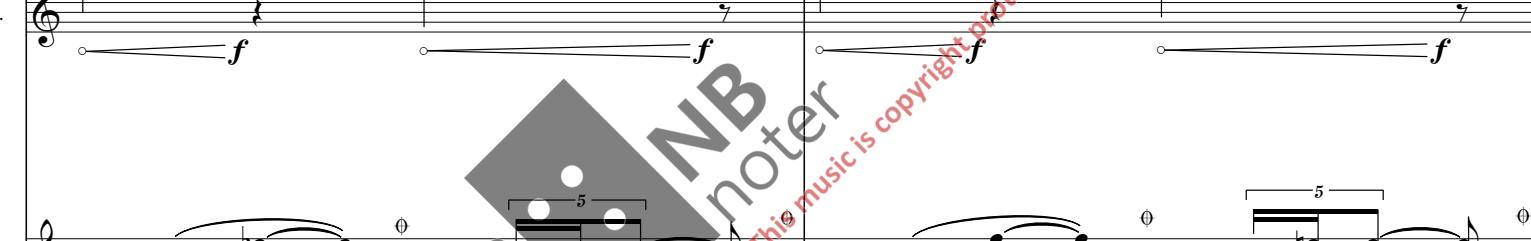

Musical score for flute (fl.), clarinet (cl.), and violin (vln.) from bar 78 to 89. The score consists of three staves. The flute and clarinet play sustained notes with dynamics f.
